A brief guide to probate

When selling a property left behind by a relative, probate is often involved. But what is it?

It's the formal permission needed to deal with someone's estate, basically their property, money, and possessions, when they die. If you are named in the deceased person's will as an executor, you can apply for probate.

But even if they didn't leave a will, depending on your relationship to them, you can apply to become the administrator of the estate. In most cases, you will need legal permission to sell their property, hence the need to apply for probate.

Prepare properly

Before applying for probate, it's advisable to do some preparations if a property is part of their estate.

- Estimate the value of the deceased's assets.
- From a property perspective, it's wise to get two valuations from respected local estate agents.
- Be clear of any valuation as this may have inheritance tax implications further down the line. We suggest contacting HMRC or a solicitor who can advise you professionally.

Applying for probate can take between four and eight weeks.

However, you can market a property for sale during this time as you await the granting of probate.

Please note: You will not be able to complete the sale of the property until probate has been granted.

Don't worry if you're still feeling unsure of things. This is where a good solicitor, allied to working with a reputable estate agent can be hugely beneficial and reduce any stresses you may have.

Five things to consider

This can be a tremendously emotional and challenging time for you, with many things to remember and loose ends to tie up. It's easy (and natural) to overlook certain things.

Below we've listed five frequently overlooked things you need to pay some consideration to.

- 1 Letting go

The sentimental value of a loved one's items shouldn't be underestimated. That's why the clearance of their belongings and furniture needs to be handled with care and consideration. Wherever possible (and after legal advice), it's often best to gather the family together to see who wants what and what items can be removed by a clearance company or donated to charity shops.
- 2 Security and maintenance

If you are applying for probate, the property could be vacant for months. This means the security of the home needs to be looked at. Maintenance can also be an issue. In the colder months, the heating and water system needs to be regularly checked. In warmer months, the outside of the property may need care, especially as many potential buyers will be put off online by photos of overgrown gardens or broken fences/gates.
- 3 Insurance cover

This is often overlooked when a homeowner has died, and the property sits vacant. Ideally, contact your insurance company, explain the situation, and see what levels of cover are available. Most offer 'vacant property insurance', a necessary cost for any property left unoccupied for more than 30 days.

4 Keeping it in the family

Once probate is granted, selling to a family member may look like a relatively easy option. However, it can work out to be more complicated than a sale to a stranger. This is due to the need to agree on a suitable price, work to a timeline, and the emotions which are sometimes involved.

5 Quick sale caution

There are many companies out there that promise to buy properties quickly for cash. And as attractive as a quick cash sale can sound during a testing period of your life, you and any other beneficiaries of the sale can end up thousands of pounds out of pocket. This is because the property hasn't been professionally marketed as it would be if you sold it through a reputable, local estate agency.

Frequently asked questions

Over the years that we've been helping people with their inheritance and probate sales, we've been asked a lot of questions.

My parent has died, leaving behind a property, what should my first step be?

While we've seen some people handle a probate sale on their own, the vast majority contact a solicitor who is experienced in these matters to work on their behalf. That's why we suggest contacting a local one who knows the area and the agencies that work within it.

How will I know I'm getting an accurate valuation for sales and tax purposes?

Any agent can pluck a juicy looking figure out of the air. But be warned, proceed with caution when you encounter this approach. You need to think like a detective here and ensure any valuation is backed up with comparable evidence which shows similar properties in the area achieving the price suggested. Successful sales leave clues behind, and the main indicator is that the property was valued correctly.

Does it cost more to sell a probate property?

The sale shouldn't incur higher legal fees than an ordinary property sale. However, there are additional costs to consider, like insurance and maintenance.

I don't live locally, so how will viewings be handled?

We will accompany all viewings as standard. And as a local estate agent, we will also regularly visit the property to check everything is ok with it. We can arrange for local tradespeople to carry out any maintenance and we work with trusted house clearance companies.

Frequently asked questions

Can I market the property while I'm awaiting probate to be granted?

Yes. But you cannot legally complete on the sale until probate is granted.

How would you market the property?

We apply a different strategy to each property – because no two properties or sellers' situations are the same. Fundamentally, we look at three core areas when we've been instructed to work for a client.

1. Location – Where the property is and the amenities, services, and environment around it.
2. Presentation – What condition is the property currently in and how could it be improved if necessary.
3. Process – As mentioned above, any agent can promise a price. What is far more beneficial to you is knowing the process your agent will follow to ensure the best price is achieved.

What is the difference between using an estate agent and going to auction or a quick buying service?

While an auction and cash buying companies may provide a faster route to a sale, it often means you could be missing out on thousands. As a trusted estate agent working as your support partner through this process, we will be on hand to guide you every step of the way. You'll have access to our extensive network of local contacts, and our area knowledge and database of people looking to move means we're very confident in achieving you the best possible price with the minimum of stress and disruption.

Frequently asked questions

Should I refurbish the property ready for sale?

Although a fresh coat of paint never goes amiss, you might not need to spend as much as you think you do. Each property is different, but our general advice here would be to make the property as clean and obstruction-free as possible. We can recommend trusted local companies who handle house clearance, cleaning, maintenance and repairs. Gardens are increasingly in demand since the pandemic, so if your property has one, ensure the front and back areas are neat, tidy, and easy on the eye.

What should I do about Inheritance Tax (IHT)?

This is a complex area, and different properties fall under separate tax brackets. We suggest not going down the DIY Google route and instead speak to your accountant, solicitor, or qualified IHT adviser. This way, you can avoid any unexpected tax bills.

11-point checklist

Here's our 11-point checklist to help you prepare for a sale.

- If probate is involved, arrange a call with a solicitor who is experienced in this area
- Speak to your accountant or tax adviser about any Inheritance Tax issues.
- Get valuations from two or three estate agents for valuations. Remember, seek evidence for any sale prices they provide. Don't just choose the agent with the highest valuation or cheapest fee. This is often a false economy.
- Instruct a conveyancing solicitor to handle the legalities of your sale.
- If the property has valuable items, it may be worth getting an auctioneer to value them. Check with your solicitor to see if any legal implications apply to the probate before doing this. Arrange for a home clearance company to visit the property, if required.
- Arrange for a cleaning company to attend the property, if necessary.
- Ensure that the drainage and heating systems have been checked.
- Arrange vacant property insurance. Sometimes insurers will insist that the property has been cleared before issuing cover.
- Create a safe place for any paperwork you may need to refer to.
- Instruct your agent to start marketing the property following the process they have in place.
